

Once upon a time, there was a girl who did not know where her future was going to take her. *She was at a point in her life where she felt like she could go in very different directions, and was not entirely sure which path was the right one to take. She felt that she could either try to remain practical and use the skills which her education had taught her, or she could take a chance and try to turn one of her strongest passions into a successful career!

Although the latter option seems like it would deliver more of a happy ending, the reality is that straying from her education would pose a much greater risk for her than finding a career from her degree. If she were to abandon what she has spent the last few years learning, she would have to invest a great deal of time and energy into this new career path. It would be very difficult for her, because there are many aspects of this type of business and livelihood, which the girl would have to read up on and familiarize herself with before even thinking about heading down this direction.

The girl has asked others for their own opinions and thoughts about what she should do. But she came to realize that no matter who she asks or how many times she tries to find a clear answer to her question, there is no way of knowing what the right decision is which she should make. NO ONE CAN TELL HER WHAT WILL WORK OUT BEST FOR HER, AND THE REALITY IS THAT NO ONE KNOWS HER BETTER THAN HERSELF WHEN IT COMES TO FIGURING OUT WHAT SHE WANTS AND WHERE SHE WOULD LIKE TO FIND HERSELF TEN YEARS LATER IN LIFE. She is slowly but surely beginning to accept that there may be no right or wrong answer here, but rather two different options which she must take time to consider before taking action. And whichever path she chooses to go down, the girl has realized that the important part is to not waste time second-guessing and to simply try to make the best out of whatever situation she may find herself in. The girl knows that it is scary entering a world as an adult without feeling like you know yet your place in it. But as she has learned in the past, time makes adjustment easier in every facet of life. And in moments of uncertainty, the best aim she can reach for is to ultimately have no regrets.